Workshop 1(11th and 12th graders): Instructions, Reflection Questions, and Submission Folders

Love as a Force for Change - From our Portrait of a Latin Learner - I can use the skills and perspectives I learned in Latin to create positive change in my community and the world.

You will create your contribution to the story of “love as a force for change in Latin.”

- What does it mean to use love as a force for change?
- What does it feel like? How does this love show up in our community already?
- What does this love mean to you?
- What can you offer in this conversation to help us move toward becoming the loving community we strive to be, where everyone feels empowered to create positive change?

Audio Room:

Record an audio file addressing the reflection questions that will be shared as a one-time podcast on Roman Radio. Please submit your file to this Google folder. You can record the file on your phone or computer using any program that works if it allows you to submit a file to the Google folder. Please title the file “last name, first name” (e.g., Woods, Brandon).

Facilitators: Students can record in their room, the hallway, etc. Please confirm that the student is working on the project and has submitted a file to the folder.

Video Room:

Record a video on your phone and upload it to this Google folder addressing the reflection questions. We will compile some videos into a collection and share it with the community.

Facilitators: Students can record in their room, the hallway, etc. Please make sure that you confirm that the student is working on the project and that they have submitted a file to the appropriate Google folder. Please make them show you their submission. You do not need to watch the film but confirm their video was submitted.

Visual Art Room:

Create an art piece representing your reflections or story that will be displayed in the school. Pieces may not be anonymous. Please have your name somewhere on the piece, including the back. Please turn your finished piece into the room facilitator. Please tell the facilitator if it needs to dry, and we will keep a list. Please share this best practice document with students.

Facilitators: Let students know they will have three options for creating a visual: they can use card stock to create an image, pre-made images to create a collage, or butcher paper to create a collaborative banner. Students can stay in the room and use the provided supplies to create. They can also go to an art room to paint. Please confirm that the student is working on the project. Students should submit their finished project to you. You can leave it in Brandon's office. Please make sure that students have their names on the piece. If it is drying in the art room, please list those names and turn them in with the finished projects. Brandon will collect their pieces later and double-check that they have been submitted.

Writing Room:

Create a piece of writing (personal essay, short memoir, poem, etc.) addressing the reflection questions we will compile into a collection of works. Please submit your work to this Google folder. Pieces can't be submitted anonymously. Please name your file "last name, first name" (e.g., Woods, Brandon).

Facilitators: Students should stay in the room to write. Please make sure that you confirm that the student is working on the project and that they have submitted a file to the folder.

Workshops (2 and 3)

1. Sydney Poitier: Bridging Divides and Defeating Prejudice via Cinema	In honor of MLK Day, enjoy a screening of In the Heat of the Night (1967), starring Sydney Poitier as a detective confronting racial prejudice in the Deep South. Explore how Poitier's groundbreaking performance challenged stereotypes and sparked dialogue about social change. After the movie, discuss the power of film to bridge divides and defeat prejudice. In the Heat of the Night won five Oscars, including Best Picture in 1967.
