Please rate which WI Administrative Standards (below) were most evident within this observation.
Using the following scale:

Mastery	Proficient	Developing	Unsatisfactory
Candidate demonstrates actions and performance that involve teachers/staff, students, community, and other stakeholders, and consistently meets or exceeds performance expectations for those tasks related to the standard's criteria. Candidates performing at this level have demonstrated leadership in the criteria areas represented in the standard, both inside and outside of their school.	Candidate demonstrates consistent professional choices and actions in the performance of criteria-related tasks of the standard. Evidence shows integration of theory and best practice in criteria-related tasks and performance is at proficient level of above for all criteria.	Candidate demonstrates the knowledge and skills to influence teacher, staff, student and organizational achievement, but does not consistently apply them in demonstrated performance related to the criteria of the standard. Evidence indicates some integration of theory and best practice. While evidence is provided that some of the criteria are addressed at a proficient level, the evidence does not support the ability of the candidate to perform at a proficient level against the majority of the criteria.	Candidate does not convey understanding of the concepts underlying the standard And/ or does not exhibit choices and actions consistent with the standard; evidence provided is shallow, and does not directly demonstrate the candidate's ability to perform against the criteria described for the standard.

General Observations of Leadership Practice based on Event/Standards/Leadership Displayed:

Blake conducted two faculty surveys regarding the school's cell policy. The first survey data was retrieved prior to the implementation of a new school policy of collection of cell phones at the start of each class session, and the second survey took place after this policy was implemented. Blake created a slide deck presentation sharing the data retrieved, and the presentation also included current research on cell phone use/distraction in the classroom. Finally, Blake presented this information to our faculty.

Blake demonstrated leadership by choosing a topic that was pertinent to our school, and by soliciting the feedback of our faculty on this topic. He was able to compare the results in the surveys both before and after the new policy. He presented in a cohesive way. The administrative standards that were most evident were: School Improvement, Operations and Management, Professional Community, and Care and Support. With a changing environment, schools must consistently evaluate processes and policies to demonstrate continuous improvement that prioritizes the best interest of students. In doing so, faculty input is imperative to make the best decisions and encourage professional collaboration. In order to implement change, leaders must be able to compile data, engage stakeholders, and create feasible solutions. Blake was able to demonstrate these forms of leadership.

What area(s) of strength did you observe?

Blake took initiative to seek out data and input on an important topic, reached out to admin to seek their perspective, and shared his observations with our entire faculty. I thought Blake's presentation was a healthy balance of research, data, and his own personal thoughts on the topic. It was the perfect precursor to a check in with faculty on their thoughts regarding the current policy and any suggestions for change.

What if any recommendations would you make for development?

The presentation provided valuable information regarding an important topic in education. I encourage Blake to continue to employ these skills to engage stakeholders and demonstrate leadership.

Other Comments:

Blake did a good job!
